Organization System:

Midpoint
Final

Risk Factors:

- Will it break/alter existing code?
- Are product specifications clear?
- Are we depending on APIs etc?

High - Significant uncertainty exists, the technology is unfamiliar, or failure could seriously affect the project.

Medium - There is some uncertainty, a few dependencies, or a possibility of unexpected problems.

Low - The requirements are clear, the technology is familiar, and the story is relatively straightforward.

Story Points:

- Story points reward team members for solving problems based on difficulty, not time spent
- measures the total effort required to deliver value to the user
- 20 points = 16 hours
- Story Point scale: 1, 2, 3, 5, 8, 13, 20

1: Trivial & Clear (standard task, no risk)
2: Simple & Routine (low complexity, no unknowns)
3: Medium Effort (requires some thought, but clear path)
5: Moderate Complexity (requires design thought, multiple files, or integration)
8: High Effort / High Risk (complex, impacts multiple systems, or has minor unknowns)
13: Extreme Complexity (huge effort or heavy technical uncertainty)
20: Too big (consider splitting into smaller tasks?)

Points are based off of priority level - stories that individually could take more time, may reuse code therefore demanding less story points
